Students from Adelaide's Flinders University have developed a campaign to take a stand against sexual assault and harassment culture.

The Be A Better Human campaign encourages us all to assess our own behaviours and be able to contribute to an ongoing dialogue around consent, respect and empathy.

Swinburne Student Union are proud to bring the Be a Better Human campaign to Swinburne.

[VOICEOVER]

Be a Better Human was created with a group of Flinders student for Flinders students to reflect our campus culture and what we think everyone needs to appreciate; consent, respect and empathy.

The campaign is called Be a Better Human because we don't just want it to be about what we shouldn't do. We want it to be about self-improvement for everyone. And when we say everyone, we really do mean everyone.

We are encouraging everyone who is a part of our campus community to take a moment and consider how we can better our behaviour.

Over the next few weeks we're going to talk about affirmative consent, how to ask for it and ensure that it is enthusiastically given.

We're also gonna talk about what happens when consent is not provided and what to do, as someone who changed their mind or never said yes, as that person's friend or even as a bystander.

We're also going to look at the culture and attitudes that shape the way we think about sex, consent, and well, each other because it affects everyone and it is something we ought to explore.

Join the conversation and let's figure out how we can be better humans
