Audio/video for this transcript available from: <http://commons.swinburne.edu.au>

Swinburne Library have digitised over 200 journal issues from the Design Special Collection. They are available in an online magazine reader format.

To access this online collection, navigate to the library web page.

Scroll down to Popular library links and select A-Z databases.

Enter the collection name - Design Special Collection and click search.

The collection name will be listed below Click on the title

As this point, you may be required to enter your Swinburne login and password details.

A list of all the journal titles available in the collection will now be displayed.

The number next to each journal title indicates the number of issues available.

The list below displays each issue's journal name, volume, issue number, year of publication as well a brief description. The description lists notable articles and advertisements from that issue.

To access the issue, click on the title. The full description will be displayed for that issue.

To access the issue's content, click on the front page image.

You will now have access to the full digitised copy.

You can scroll through by clicking on the arrow to the right or the thumbnail images at the bottom to jump to a particular page or section that you might be interested in.

You can also print sections by clicking on the print icon here at the top.

Other digitised Australian journals as well as newspapers are also available via the National Library Trove web page.
