Peter Nguyen-Brown is the Co-founder and Chief Experience Officer of software company, LiveTiles.

He graduated from Swinburne in 1998 with a Bachelor of Applied Science and launched LiveTiles in 2014 with his business partner, Karl Redenbach. The business is now the fastest growing technology company in the country, with offices across the US, Europe and Australia.

LiveTiles is used by millions of people in over 1,000 companies globally, and Peter believes its success comes down to transforming Employee Experience in the workplace.

This is also why he created the wellness movement "LiveSmiles", which has a mission to make well-being and wellness an intrinsic part of workplace culture. Peter created this movement to amplify positive impact on people both within his company, and out in the broader community.

Peter Nguyen-Brown shows that, with the right vision, and the right education, it is possible to have a truly global impact for the better.
